Record of the safety induction given to a newly arrived Work Permit holder before the worker is deployed to any worksite. The employer is responsible for the worker's safety from the first day of employment and must ensure the worker understands the hazards of the job, the control measures and what to do in an emergency. Any accident — however minor — is reported the same day; a fatal or serious injury is notified to MOM within 24 hours and police assistance called on 995. The worker must not move an injured colleague unless there is immediate danger, and must not leave the worksite after an accident until the supervisor has recorded the details.
