This commitment is signed by the employer and given to the worker on arrival. It states the wage that will be transferred each month through the Wage Protection System (WPS), the date of the transfer, the employer's obligations on residency (Iqama), medical insurance, accommodation and the return ticket, and the worker's right to complain to the Ministry of Human Resources and Social Development (HRSD) without retaliation. The employer accepts that a failure to pay wages through WPS exposes it to a wage claim, a block on new visas and the cancellation of its recruitment file.

4. RETURN TICKET, FINAL SETTLEMENT AND END OF SERVICE

The employer pays the return air ticket to the worker's home city at the end of the contract, and provides one ticket for the worker every two years where the contract is renewed, in accordance with article 60. The end-of-service award is calculated under article 84 — half a month's wage for each of the first five years and one month's wage for each subsequent year, on the last wage — and is paid with the final settlement within the period set by the labour office. The employer settles all wages, accrued leave, the ticket and the award before the worker's final exit and does not require an exit-only visa, a waiver or a release as a condition of payment.

Where the worker resigns, the award is reduced in accordance with article 85: no award below two years' service, one third between two and five years, and two thirds between five and ten years. The employer issues the experience certificate and the final settlement statement on the last working day.

حق الشكوى

The worker may complain to the HRSD through the call centre, the Qiwa portal or the nearest labour office, and may file a claim with the Labour Court without paying a fee. The employer may not retaliate by withholding wages, cancelling the Iqama, reporting the worker as absconding or ending the contract. The worker is given the HRSD complaint number and the name of the employer's grievance contact below.
